On a deeper level, the Giver explains that Sameness protects people from the consequences of making wrong choices by removing choice altogether. Where does Jonas volunteer? For example, Jonas never praises his groupmate Benjamin's accomplishments at the Rehabilitation Center, because doing so would draw attention to Benjamin's unique talents, and set him apart from the rest of their group. Jonas volunteers in many different places around the community instead of gravitating toward one role. Why does the community in The Giver favor "Sameness"? Did you know you can highlight text to take a note? This uncertainty contributes to Jonas's apprehension in the days leading to the Ceremony of Twelve. In order to shelter its citizens from the frightening reality of death, the elders claim the released people go "Elsewhere," a term that also refers to the land outside the community. The change is related to Jonas's ability to "see beyond" the community's Sameness technology and notice the true color of the world around him. Jonas therefore imagines released people, such as the elderly woman Larissa, living peacefully in new communities. Release is the community's euphemism for death. Before he becomes the Receiver of Memory, Jonas doesn't know how to describe the apple's change because the community erased color to establish "Sameness." When Jonas describes the apple incident, The Giver reveals that the change Jonas saw was color. Since the community controls childbirth and marriage, the elders most likely curb the citizens' sexual desires to avoid people having children outside of the system or choosing their own partner.
